

Health insurance shouldn't feel like a guessing game.

If you're self-employed or otherwise navigating the open market on your own, most of the options you'll find out there aren't actually built for someone in your situation.

This might sound familiar:

- You went straight to the marketplace and were shocked at the price for what you'd actually be getting.
- You're on COBRA and the cost is making you wince every month, but you're not sure what comes next.
- You came off a spouse's plan or an old employer plan and now you're staring at the open market for the first time.
- You've been quoted by an agent who sent you a list of plan names without ever asking what your actual situation looks like.

What I do.

Health coverage is complicated. My job is to make it simple. Whether you're self-employed, navigating the market on your own, or running a small business, I'll walk you through your options and help you find the right fit.

Let's talk.

Reach out by phone, text, or email. Mention who sent you when you reach out — I'll find 15 minutes that works for you.
